What do I want to learn or understand better?

This week we choose the project, which is to implement an alternative version of the Tickster website. I have never worked with websites before, or any of the programming languages we are discussing in the moment. This is something that I want to learn to be able to contribute to the project, and also gain experience for later work. I can watch tutorials online and learn from my team members to achieve this.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

I think that to learn these new technologies, it is good to collaborate among the team and share your knowledge. The team will work and learn more efficient this way. I will do my own research and share the information with the team.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

Since the team's first sprint will start next week, the main focus has been on finding a project. Some discussion and planning on how the sprint will look like took place. Such as, who will be the Scrum master, and who will be the product owner. When the sprint starts, I will contribute to epics, user stories, and acceptance criteria.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

This week, my contribution towards the team's deliveries has been to work on the business model canvas, the mockup, the project scope, and the Definition of Done. This was of course done by all the members in the team.
