What do I want to learn or understand better?

From my limited experience of the scrum - work procedure, I have noticed that writing good, independent user stories is an important, but difficult skill to master. This is definitely something I want to get better at. I also look forward to getting better at anticipate productivity.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

I believe that the most important thing is to be open minded and respectful when helping others. Because everyone has different ways of thinking and modelling things in their head, it is important to remember that the first attempt of explaining something might not always be successful.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

During the Minetest-workshop the whole team participated in deciding on user stories to do for the sprint as well as planning, understanding and carry through that story.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

Since we are on week 1 of the project there is not that much to contribute to, I would say. I might have been a little more passive during group discussions than I normally am. This was probably since there were new people on the team, and the fact that I had decided to go easy on school-work the first week after the exams. For the remaining of the project such decisions is probably something one should inform the group about to prevent irritation within the group.
