What do I want to learn or understand better?

I have been doing mostly frontend developing and would like to look at and learn more about the backend as well. I also feel that I am understanding how to utilize the User Stories better and would like to understand it even better.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

I have contributed with a lot of css and I have become the person to ask for help with css-stuff. We mostly code together as of now (hopefully a little bit more individually in the future) so at least for the css-stuff a have been the "navigator" while one of my team mates have been the "driver", meaning that they are writing all the code on the computer and I am kind of telling them what to write. So when I know stuff that they don't they kind of start to get an understanding since they are doing the actual coding and I try to explain why as much as I can in the meantime.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

Same as last week, we haven't applied any more Scrum practises and I have been active and contributing to all the discussions we have had this week.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

I was working with the frontend and we did event cards this week, it was challenging but we made it. Mostly I would say I contributed with a little bit of prior knowledge about why things didn't look the way they were supposed to and then also fixing those problems together.
