What do I want to learn or understand better?

This last sprint we had almost a user story per team member. Which was for the most part small last things to fix but they took some time. Because one team member was sick, her user story was not done. The rest of the team had only time to work on their user stories. I want to learn what do to during this kind of problem. I will achieve this by researching my question and talking to people with experience.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

This will probably be the same during the entire project since the team were new to the technologies in the beginning. All I can do is to share important information and research with the team to help us solve our problems or questions.

What is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

Just as all the other sprints I participated in the sprint planning, were we discussed the goal for the week and wrote the sprints user stories. I also helped to write the acceptance criteria and the task breakdowns for the user stories. The team voted and discussed about the velocity and the cost which I think we have gotten good at. During the sprint I, together with the team, worked on the user stories. I also contributed during the meeting with the stakeholder, and the discussions for the sprint review and sprint retrospective where we reflected and evaluated the sprint and how to improve it for the next sprint.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

Just as last sprint, I contributed towards the team´s deliveries by working on the user stories that we set up during the sprint planning. I worked on showing the event date in the right format, and displaying the amount of events in the greeting text. Other than that, I helped with displaying the search bar results as I had worked on that last week. I was present on all the meetings and took part in the team discussions on how to solve the user stories. I also contributed to the team reflection.
